Embrace Opportunities for Change

One of the greatest sources of friction in many people's work environment is change. Just when you get on solid ground with your manager, she's promoted and you have to learn to relate to her successor. Just when you complete that big project and look forward to some downtime a new and bigger account takes its place. Just when you thought you had the office politics figured out, your company is bought out by another corporation. And on and on the cycle of change spins, leaving us dazed and unsettled by its turbulence.

Much of this friction is caused by our expectations and our desire for things to go smoothly. It is indeed ironic that out of our desire for stability, security, and predictability we set ourselves up for instability, uncertainty, and surprises. Perhaps if we adjusted our expectation to be more realistic, we wouldn't be so traumatized when change comes. And rest assured—it will come. We should expect change in our workplace and know that only God can serve as our secure anchor, our unshakeable, immovable rock.

You don't have to work very long— or live that long, for that matter— to realize that change is inevitable. It's part of the reality of life, part of God's plan, part of the dynamic design of His creation. Yet why are we so resistant to embracing change? Why does change in our workplace threaten us in particular?...

USDA Consumer Alert: Keeping Food Safe During an Emergency

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is issuing recommendations to help minimize the potential for foodborne illnesses in the wake of the winter snow storm that brought heavy snow and ice to the Midwestern United States and could leave communities without power.

"Severe weather can affect food safety," said USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service Administrator Al Almanza. "Consumers who have been impacted by the winter storm in the Midwest can ensure the safety of the food and water they may consume, even in the event of power outages by accessing information available from the USDA."

Steps to follow to prepare for a possible weather emergency:

Keep an appliance thermometer in the refrigerator and freezer. An appliance thermometer will indicate the temperature inside the refrigerator and freezer in case of a power outage and help determine the safety of the food.

Make sure the freezer is at 0° F or below and the refrigerator is at 40° F or below.

Freeze containers of water for ice to help keep food cold in the freezer, refrigerator or coolers after the power is out.

Freeze refrigerated items such as leftovers, milk and fresh meat and poultry that you may not need immediately — this helps keep them at a safe temperature longer.

Plan ahead and know where dry ice and block ice can be purchased.

Have coolers on hand to keep refrigerator food cold if the power will be out for more than 4 hours. Purchase or make ice cubes and store in the freezer for use in the refrigerator or in a cooler. Freeze gel packs ahead of time for use in coolers.

Group food together in the freezer — this helps the food stay cold longer.

Store food on shelves that will be safely out of the way of contaminated water in case of flooding.

Steps to follow after the weather emergency:

Keep the refrigerator and freezer doors closed as much as possible to maintain the cold temperature.

The refrigerator will keep food safely cold for about 4 hours if it is unopened. A full freezer will hold the temperature for approximately 48 hours (24 hours if it is half full) and the door remains closed.

Discard refrigerated perishable food such as meat, poultry, fish, soft cheeses, milk, eggs, leftovers and deli items after 4 hours without power.

Food may be safely refrozen if it still contains ice crystals or is at 40° F or below when checked with a food thermometer.

Never taste a food to determine its safety!

Obtain dry or block ice to keep your refrigerator and freezer as cold as possible if the power is going to be out for a prolonged period of time. Fifty pounds of dry ice should hold an 18-cubic-foot full freezer for 2 days.

If the power has been out for several days, check the temperature of the freezer with an appliance thermometer. If the appliance thermometer reads 40° F or below, the food is safe to refreeze.

If a thermometer has not been kept in the freezer, check each package of food to determine its safety. If the food still contains ice crystals, the food is safe.

When in Doubt, throw it Out!
